

I believe I should have the right to not be bothered at home by unwanted telemarketing calls. My time at home after work is with my family and is very valuable to me. Since I have the right to not have uninvited guests inside my home, the same should also apply to uninvited phone calls inside my home. I would think this would make telemarketers happy because the numbers that they can call legally are people who are willing to take their calls. This should make their job easier and more productive. Instead they are angry because they can't talk people into buying things/services they do not want or can't take advantage of unsuspecting individuals.
